HONOURED GUEST

There are approximately 35,000 practitioners in 128 countries who practice in the manner first developed by Stu Webb, the Founder of Collaborative Practice.

This Out of Court dispute resolution process is now offered in multiple different languages.

Stu practiced divorce law for 50 years and retired in 2014.

Ready to quit law practice in 1990, Stu instead developed a new way to practice law: Collaborative Law, now also called Collaborative Practice.

In collaborative work, the practitioners work with the clients out of court and if settlement cannot be reached, all the professionals involved withdraw and the parties go to court or find another way to resolve their issues. Practitioners now include financial professionals, mental health practitioners and child specialists, which adds immeasurably to the effectiveness of our work.

Stu loves reading, jazz and higher consciousness. Reading about 100 books at a time, with over 7000 jazz tunes on his iPhone. Stu takes lessons and practices his saxophone and walks with his wife, Martha. Stu wrote a booklet, The Serenity Space and co-authored a book "Collaborative Way to Divorce.," with Ron Ousky.

After searching, and searching for years, his wonderful teacher, Rupert Spira, helped him to achieve non-duality. The drug, lithium, which kept him sane for a long time, was making him an old man at 83. After resulting health crises, they took him off Lithium, and his negative symptoms miraculously disappeared. He describes the experience "like being reborn!"

Stu further states: "I feel and have the energy of a 26 year old!! Zoom and the pandemic is ushering in a shift of consciousness, individually and collectively, that has the potential to awaken us and move us from vertical hierarchy to horizontal equality, love and creativity."

FEATURED GUEST

Hilary Linton has been practising and teaching dispute resolution for over 30 years.

A former freelance journalist, she practised civil and family law for 14 years before deciding to focus on dispute resolution theory and skills. She established Riverdale Mediation Ltd. in 2000, where she and colleagues provide affordable family mediation, arbitration, and parenting coordination services, working with lawyers and their clients and with unrepresented parties.

Riverdale's widely acclaimed training includes family mediation, arbitration and parenting coordination certificate programs, and custom-designed training for government departments, agencies, professional and faith-based ADR organizations, and law schools.

Recent projects include:

- 8-week mediation workshops and mentoring for Caribbean leaders and community members,
- family arbitration and screening for power imbalances and domestic violence for parenting coordination professionals in Prince Edward Island
- workshops for FDR professionals in Cape Town, South Africa.

Through Riverdale and with colleagues she has established a comprehensive family mediation internship program where she has the privilege of mentoring new professionals as they enter the field. Hilary is honoured to have been selected to provide government funded family information and mediation services in Toronto's Superior Court of Justice and Ontario Court of Justice. Through mediate393, mediate311 and mediate47, she and several teams of outstanding professionals provide mediation and information services to separating couples in the courts, and subsidized family mediation to all separating couples who seek the service. She is dedicated helping the public access these affordable and high quality services.

A significant focus of Hilary's work is exploring the impact that imbalances of negotiation power and domestic violence have on dispute resolution, gaining knowledge and skills to manage them and sharing her expertise with colleagues. To contribute to a vibrant family dispute resolution community that emphasizes the importance of such dynamics, Hilary and three colleagues co-founded the Family Dispute Resolution Institute (FDRIO) in 2014 which now offers several professional designations and Standards of Practice that built on the "do no harm" principle. She is a past Director of the Ontario Association of Family Mediation (OAFM), a Founding Member of Collaborative Practice Toronto and a former chair of the Ontario Bar Association (OBA) ADR Section. She is a long-time supporter of Family Mediation Canada (FMC) and the Association of Family and Conciliation Courts-Ontario. She is the 2014 recipient of the OBA Award of Excellence in ADR. Hilary is honoured to have her work recognized by Award of Excellence from the Ontario Bar Association and the Family Dispute Resolution Institute of Ontario.
